Georgetown Street Flooding

MEDIA ADVISORY

For Immediate Release

June 12, 2020

Chatham County, GA (June 12, 2020) – The Chatham County Police Department is on the scene of heavy street flooding in Georgetown.

Officers and the department's high-water vehicles are standing by in the Knightsbridge area. Strong storms and heavy afternoon rains have caused water to cover the street in some areas. No rescues have been needed, but our officers and high-water vehicles are there in case that becomes necessary.

People living in the area are advised to stay home and not venture out. Those who are not at home right now, but need to return, will be directed by officers on the scene about how to safely do so.

Everyone is urged to use caution, and to remember that it is never safe to drive through standing water.
