Savannah Weather Radio System Down

Chatham County, GA (April 23, 2020) – According to the Charleston National Weather Service, the Savannah weather radio system is down until further notice. Do not rely on the weather radio system for the potential storms this afternoon/evening. All residents are encouraged to tune into local news or download a weather-alerting app. Residents can sign up for CEMA alerts by visiting the Chatham Emergency Management Agency at <https://www.chathamemergency.org/> and clicking on “CEMA Alerts.”

As a reminder, Wireless Emergency Alert (WEA) system will go off if there is a tornado warning, but only in the warning area. Similarly, Chatham County's Emergency Warning Siren System will automatically activate, but only in the warning area.

If there are questions about the Savannah weather radio system being down, please contact Charleston Weather Service. 843-747-5860.
